

The ESPCG has established a reputation for delivering high quality educational events from London to Rome, from Bucharest to Zagreb. The Society's mission has always been to increase knowledge of gastrointestinal disorders in primary care and on Thursday 23rd and Friday 24th October 2025 the ESPCG is hosting a two-day educational event at the University of Barcelona.

Different disorders such as IBS, IBD, infectious hepatitis, alcoholic and non-alcoholic liver disease are a focus for the Society to ensure adequate management in different European scenarios. Latest developments in disorders of the gut brain axis, treatments for IBD and new treatments for the liver make these key topics for the Society as well as for the wider gastroenterology community as we work together to help reduce the European burden of these diseases and conditions. Immigration among European countries is also a recent and relevant factor adding to the need for wider hepatic knowledge.

The ESPCG plans to partner with UEG, EASL, ESNM, locally with the University of Barcelona and Clinic Hospital. They will bring together a list of speakers with the ability to educate and inform a national and European primary care audience.

Primarily GPs from across Europe, especially those with an interest in gastroenterology including hepatology. There will also be a local audience drawn from Catalan and the wider Spanish GP network as well as those invited by EASL and the University of Barcelona. We also expect support from all the ESPCG national societies to encourage attendance especially from UK, Italy, France, Netherlands, Greece, Romania, Croatia, Bulgaria, Sweden, Norway, Estonia, Czech Republic and Poland.
